December-January in brief

Review of Short Course on Refugees and Statelessness - December 2012

The Short Course on Refugees and Statelessness was held in December 2012 in Bangkok and Maesot. The Short Course on Refugees and Statelessness aimed to strengthen participants’ capacity, expertise, and knowledge on refugee and statelessness issues in the region. The course was an interdisciplinary overview on refugees and statelessness, including political, legal, social, and economic aspects. It examined responses by civil society, government, and intergovernmental organizations, and develop an understanding how to better promote and protect the rights of stateless people and refugees. The course was intended for individuals already working on refugee issues, whether through academic research or NGO activity. The participants were NGO workers, policy makers, lawyers, paralegals, caseworkers, researchers, post-graduate students and refugees themselves.

The course was supported by leading experts working on refugee issues in the region, including academics, activists, pro-bono lawyers, UNHCR representatives, and NGO workers.

The course was a joint initiative between the Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN), United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) and the Institute of Human Rights and Peace Studies (IHRPS) at Mahidol University, Thailand.

The 5th High Commissioner’s Dialogue on Protection Challenges - ‘Faith and Protection’ - December 2012

Anoop Sukumaran represented the APRRN Secretariat at the 5th High Commissioner’s Dialogue on Protection Challenges which focused on the theme of ‘Faith and Protection’. Participants strongly confirmed the convergence and complementarity between international protection and humanitarian principles as they relate to refugees, stateless people and the internally displaced on the one hand, and fundamental religious values and traditions on the other. The Dialogue also generated a deeper appreciation of how the lives of those that UNHCR serves are shaped by religion and spirituality.

For more information go to: http://www.unhcr.org/pages/501a39ce6.html

The High Commissioner’s Structured Dialogue on Partnership - December 2012

Anoop Sukumaran also attended the Structured Dialogue on Partnership. The Dialogue provided an opportunity for NGOs and the UNHCR to review how we work together and to identify ways to make our partnerships more effective.

Regional Conference on ‘Leveraging Child Protection & Role of stakeholders’ - December 2012

APRRN was invited to give an introductory speech at the Regional Conference on ‘Leveraging Child Protection & Role of stakeholders’. The conference was an

Inside this issue

December - January in brief 1
Feature: Social Innovation 3
Introducing our interns 6
Calls to become further involved with APRRN 7
Join Mailing lists 8
Upcoming events 9
Recent reports 13
Best Practices for Social Innovation

An initiative by Protect and Save the Children of Malaysia in collaboration with Child Rights Coalition Asia. It was held in Malaysia, December 2012. Below is part of the text of the speech as given by Danielle Grigsby.

Children in every country, culture and society face various forms of abuse, neglect, exploitation and violence. Violence takes place at home, in school, in institutions, at work, in the community, in armed conflict and natural disasters. In many countries, violence against children such as corporal punishment remains legal and socially accepted. Growing up with violence seriously affects a child's development, dignity, and physical and psychological integrity. Throughout the world, child protection issues are blight in society.

Nothing can be more heinous than crimes committed against defenseless and innocent children. Yet society allows this cycle of violence to be perpetuated. Cultural norms such as teaching children blind obedience and not speak up against elders, the family dignity is more important than the protection of the child have played a large part in shaping this stance of denial. Child Protection is seen as a concept within the family and not just as a concern of external environment. In general, Child Protection starts within the family and extend beyond.

It is, therefore, timely that each and every community and civil society take responsibility to advocate for the safety of the child by protecting children from child sexual abuse. Creating a safe environment that encourages children to disclose and not tolerate child sexual abuse and exploitation from thriving is of our priority. It is only by giving the children their rights to protection that they will fulfill their survival and developmental rights.

Safety of a child is an adult’s responsibility. Awareness and educating both community and children would be a first step to preventing child abuse and ensuring Child Protection also breaking the silence of abuse. With education comes knowledge and with knowledge comes the courage and confidence to take action to overcome abuse and violence. Perpetrators would be starved when the shroud of darkness and secrecy is replaced with openness and enlightenment.

Review of Training of Trainers on Women and Girls at Risk - January 2013

APRRN would like to thank all participants for sharing their time, energy, expertise and wisdom. It was a wonderful week in which we learnt so much from each other and can look forward to advancing the protection issues for women and children in the region.

We would also like to extend a special thanks to Eftepy Mitchell, Katrina Maliamauv and Linda Bartolomei for facilitating such a successful conference.
Feature: Social Innovation
By Shannon Murphy

Using Social Innovation to Improve the Lives and Advance the Rights of Refugees throughout the Asia Pacific Region

Stages of Innovation
The Skoll Centre for Social Entrepreneurship has simplified the innovation process into three stages: identifying and understanding the problem, generating and piloting solutions, and then sustainability and scaling.

In the first stage it is important to immerse yourself in gaining a deep understanding of the problem, its root causes, and gaps in current solutions. This involves empathy and listening to those affected by the problem.

The second stage is probably where the old cliché “think outside the box” seems to fit, or as the great innovator, the late Steve Jobs, put it: “Think different!” Obviously there are no quick fixes to lasting social problems like poverty, violence, and inequality, but more effective solutions could be generated through new approaches.

Once you have an idea, the real challenge is to actually try it out! When you feel you have found a successful intervention and worked out all of the “kinks” from your pilot project, the next step is to ensure that the intervention is sustainable and then scale so that it can have a larger impact. Scaling can happen through information sharing with other key players in the field or replication to new areas or with different populations.

What is Social Innovation?
As social innovation is an emerging field, there are many different definitions floating around, but I particularly like this one by Phillips, Deiglmeier, and Miller (2008):

A novel solution to a social problem that is more effective, efficient, sustainable, or just, than existing solutions and for which the value created accrues primarily to society as a whole rather than private individuals.

Source: http://www.ssireview.org/articles/entry/rediscovering_social_innovation

Generating Solutions
Here are some things to consider when looking for new solutions:

Participant Engagement—“Necessity is the mother of invention,” but a spin-off of this states “Adversity is the mother of innovation.” Remember that personal motivation may inspire those affected to create their own solutions and they should be consulted and involved in the process.

Innovation in Organizations
Multi-disciplinary Teams—Forming teams made up of people from different backgrounds, with varying experiences and education can provide diverse perspectives and lead to surprising new ideas.

Dedicated Spaces for Innovation—Create a space that will allow the team to immerse themselves in the problem and feel comfortable to focus on creating solutions.
Combining Methods– Could two approaches be combined to create a more effective solution?

Positive Deviance– Look at cases of positive deviance, or people that are able to overcome the problem despite their circumstances.

Technology– How can the latest technology be leveraged to create a solution?

Cross-Sector Partnerships– Can the private sector offer any help or ideas?

Innovation Methodology– What methods are you using to come up with solutions? Consider convening a future search event or consulting experts through the Delphi method.

Reframe the Problem– If you get stuck, look at the problem from a different perspective. Try using a reframing matrix.

Source: http://www.mindtools.com/pages/article/newCT_05.htm

Finite Timelines– Deadlines are just a natural part of our work, and innovation is no exception; creating a project timeline will ensure that progress is made.

Calculated Risk Taking/Accepting Failure– Innovation can only occur when people and organizations are flexible and open to new ideas and practices.

Devote Funds to Innovation– I was hesitant to write this one, as I understand, working in the social sector, funds are precious and it would be hard to divert program funds to innovation, but I’ve included it as something to ponder. Try to think of all the great things that have come out of research and development projects in the private sector and remember that there are funds out there that are specifically designated for social innovation projects.

Got a great idea?

For my time at APRRN, I thought it might be interesting to create a database of innovative practices throughout the network to share with each other. If you have incorporated social innovation into your organization, have an innovative program or program component, or have ideas of how APRRN can be socially innovative, please contact me at shannon.aprrn@gmail.com Check out below for an example!
What is Social Enterprise?

This is an emerging trend within the field of social innovation, and though there are debates about what exactly constitutes a social enterprise, the basic concept is that it is an entity that has a social mission connected with a business/entrepreneurial venture.

The youth were given some seed money to start their own business within the youth center, which they decided would be an afterschool café. Just as a real job, youth interested in working at the café had to go through an application process and job interview, but also just as a real job, the youth are provided an allowance for their work. In taking ownership of the program, the youth selected the menu that they would serve including fruit juice, floats, sandwiches, and even fried chicken.

Yayasan Chow Kit has invited local business interested in social corporate responsibility to do workshops with the youth to build their skills in areas such as entrepreneurship, budgeting, and cooking. The youth even write the budgets for funding proposals.

As this unique program was just piloted last year, they are working on future plans for sustainability including investing in more equipment to grow the business, opening the café to the public, and even contracting with the café to provide other meals at the youth center.

The Yayasan Chow Kit organization noticed that their youth center had become damaged through the wear-and-tear of the center’s clientele. A deeper analysis into this problem showed that the youth were not taking care of the facility because they did not take ownership for the youth center and so they did not feel a responsibility for maintaining it. To instill responsibility and leadership into the youth, Yayasan Chow Kit had the idea to have the youth create and manage their own social enterprise.

Innovation in APRRN

Yayasan Chow Kit Youth Café

The youth were given some seed money to start their own business within the youth center, which they decided would be an afterschool café. Just as a real job, youth interested in working at the café had to go through an application process and job interview, but also just as a real job, the youth are provided an allowance for their work. In taking ownership of the program, the youth selected the menu that they would serve including fruit juice, floats, sandwiches, and even fried chicken.

Yayasan Chow Kit has invited local business interested in social corporate responsibility to do workshops with the youth to build their skills in areas such as entrepreneurship, budgeting, and cooking. The youth even write the budgets for funding proposals. As this unique program was just piloted last year, they are working on future plans for sustainability including investing in more equipment to grow the business, opening the café to the public, and even contracting with the café to provide other meals at the youth center.
Introducing our Interns

Rakinder Reehal
Rakinder Reehal has been APRRN’s Research Officer since September 2012. With a Masters in Understanding and Securing Human Rights at the University of London, she has experience of working in Japan, Australia, China, Thailand, and Europe.

Rakinder has carried out research for the Refugee Law Initiative at the Institute for Advanced Studies, the Immigration Detention Coalition, UNHCR, and the Institute for Commonwealth Studies. Her primary research interests are statelessness, the feminisation of migration, and environmentally induced migration.

Shannon Murphy
My name is Shannon Murphy and I’m excited to be interning with the APRRN Secretariat in Bangkok. I came to Bangkok from Boston, Massachusetts, where I have been working towards my master’s degree in social work at Boston College. The social work program that I have been pursuing has an international focus, which is where I developed an interest in refugee rights. I feel very fortunate to be part of such an amazing network of people working to improve the lives of refugees around the world!

Prior to graduate school, I studied sociology at the University of Hawaii and then spent two years working as a youth development volunteer with the Peace Corps in Bulgaria. I love to travel and am thrilled with the opportunity to experience life in Bangkok and hopefully explore a bit more of Asia as well.

So far everyone at APRRN has been incredibly welcoming, the weather has been amazing, and the food…well…I’m working on increasing my spice tolerance…ha ha

Brigid McCarthy
My name is Brigid McCarthy and I am from The University of Melbourne, Australia. At the start of 2013 I am going in to my second year of law, having completed an undergraduate degree with majors in International Politics and Philosophy.

I have volunteered in a range of capacities, both in Australia and internationally. My experience with refugees and refugee communities has however been largely limited to Australia, where I have volunteered with organisations assisting resettled refugee communities and worked with a barrister who specialises in immigration and refugee law. I am excited to be working with the APRRN Secretariat and develop more of a regional understanding of refugee rights.

Incredibly, at the time of press, I am already over half way through my term with APRRN! So far I have enjoyed working in Bangkok with the Secretariat. The January WAGAR conference was a particular highlight and it was fantastic to meet so many of you and hear of the incredible work being done throughout the region.

Sophie Wade
My name is Sophie Wade and I’m interning for six weeks at the APRRN Secretariat in Bangkok. So far the other interns and I have been lucky enough to meet and work with many APRRN members, including BPSOS (who graciously allowed us to accompany them to Bangkok’s Immigration Detention Centre), those represented at the Women and Girls at Risk Training of Trainers, and Burma Border Projects, whose Mae Sot clinic we will be visiting shortly. It has been fantastic to see the work APRRN members are doing on the ground, and hearing the stories of the refugees we have met. While it has been depressing to see the situation that refugees are still facing in the region, it has been truly inspiring to meet so many people so passionate to make it change.

Studying law at the University of Melbourne, in Australia, we often feel very far removed from the issues on the ground, and why we came to be studying law in the first place. APRRN has helped me remember why I want to study the law – because it so often needs reform, or, as is the case in much of our region, better methods of implementation. The WAGAR Conference particularly helped me realise that even if a good law is in place, it is not necessarily enforced or accessible to refugees (particularly women and I believe there is more that those with legal training can do to ensure that once a law comes into force, it is actually accessible, and that the people it is intended to protect are in fact protected.

Coming from a background of studying politics, international studies and some gender studies, I hope to see the situation for refugees in the region (including in my home country of Australia, who are currently particularly disappointing in matters concerning asylum seekers) improve dramatically in coming years.

Rezwan Siddiqui

Rezwan Siddiqui is a Research Assistant for the Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN). At present he is also working at Yunus Centre, Bangladesh. Before that he completed a post-graduate degree in Geography and Environment from University of Dhaka, Bangladesh; with specialization in Disaster Management and Climate Change Migration. He has experience researching for, and working at Disaster Research, Training and Management Centre (DRTMC), Centre for Urban Studies (CUS), Asiatic Society Bangladesh, Bangladesh Youth Environmental Network (BYEI), Youth Leading Environmental Changes (YLEC) and so on.

His research interests are in the field of Forced Migration, Disaster Management, Climate Change in Bangladesh and GIS.

Calls to become further involved with APRRN

APRRN is currently seeking applications for an Internship – 4-6 month contract, April 2013 start

The Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network is an open and growing network of over 116 civil society groups and individuals committed to advancing the rights of refugees in the Asia Pacific Region through information sharing, mutual capacity building, and joint advocacy. APRRN members are diverse, comprising service providers, human rights advocacy groups, research institutions, law firms providing pro-bono legal aid, refugee community-based organisations and refugees themselves. Almost all APRRN members are civil society groups working in their specific local contexts, lobbying their governments for changes in policies and legislation to protect the rights of refugees.

We rely on the support of motivated and enthusiastic interns who are interested in the issues that APRRN tackles, and who are keen to gain valuable experience working in this area.

To apply please submit CV and cover letter to Danielle Grigsby at Danielle@aprrn.info by February 15, 2013

Internships

APRRN’s international internships are available to those with knowledge of international human rights law and mechanisms (especially refugee rights), and who are:

- Post-graduates who have completed undergraduate degrees in law, human rights or development studies (strongly encouraged to apply); or

- Post-graduates who have completed undergraduate degrees in another field, but who can demonstrate an interest in – and commitment to – refugee rights.
Compensation

APRRN offers one internship stipend every 6-months and accepts up to three additional, unfunded interns at a time.

Basic Information

Internships take place/located in Bangkok but can involve travel to other parts of the country. Note: APRRN will entertain virtual internships for individuals unable to relocate to Bangkok, temporarily. Persons interested in these virtual internships should possess strong written-English ability and a keen interest in research and writing. For more information contact Danielle at Danielle@aprrn.info.

APRRN is looking for applicants who are able to commit to a minimum of 3 months. Applicants who are able to commit for a longer period are strongly encouraged to apply.

Internship roles are unpaid. APRRN is unfortunately not able to cover or contribute to any costs associated with travel arrangements, visas, accommodation etc.

Applicants must be able to bring a laptop with wireless functionality to used for the duration on their stay

Duties and Responsibilities

Working under the supervision of Bangkok based staff, successful applicants will be required to work on matters including the following:

- Legal research and writing
- Programme support
- Administrative assistance
- Events organisation
- Communications including web content, proof reading, and drafting copy
- Thematic work (legal aid and advocacy, women and girls at risk, the right to health, statelessness, immigration detention)

APRRN volunteers needed to draft the Asia Pacific NGO statement for UNHCR’s Standing Committee In March

As in previous years, the APRRN secretariat has volunteered to draft the Asia Pacific NGO statement for the UNHCR standing committee meeting in March. As you know the NGO statement is a collaborative effort among NGOs in the region.

This year the following topics are to be covered by the standing committee

1. Global Programs and Partnerships
2. Africa
3. The Americas
4. Asia and the Pacific
5. Europe
6. The Middle East and North Africa
7. Budgets and Funding for 2012 and 2013
8. The High Commissioner’s 2012 Dialogue on Faith and Protection
9. Introduction of the ExCom Conclusion Theme
10. Update on Modernization/ Innovation and Simplification

Additional, optional statements could cover:

- Emergency Response and Preparedness
- Supply Management
Asia Pacific Refugee Rights
Updates

• Global Strategic Priorities for 2014–2015

• Follow-up to Recommendations of the Board of Auditors

• Update on the Work of the Inspector General’s Office

Samples of last year’s statements are available online at http://www.icva.ch/doc00001003.html

Join mailing lists

If you are interested in joining either the Right to Health or Statelessness mailing lists, please email danielle@aprrn.info with a specification as to which.

Request for information

APRRN Statelessness Working Group is seeking to better understand how APRRN members engage with this issue, through their work, in the region. If you, or your organization, works with—or on behalf of—persons who are Stateless, please email danielle@aprrn.info. Your participation is greatly appreciated!

Upcoming Events

8th April – 12th April 2013: APRRN Short Course on Refugee Law, Bangkok, Thailand

Applications received through 28 February 2013

The Centre for Applied Human Rights (University of York, UK), in partnership with the Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN), is offering a five-day Short Course on International Refugee Law and Advocacy in Bangkok in April 2013.

The course will cover the following topics:

1. Understanding the legal and policy framework of the international refugee protection regime

2. Developing national NGO networks for advocacy

3. Conducting regional and transnational impact litigation of refugee rights

4. Implementing refugee rights in domestic law

5. Engaging elected officials and the development of national legislative caucuses

6. Using national human rights institutions (NHRIs) to monitor and protect the rights of refugees

7. Using UNHCR processes to protect the rights of refugees

8. Engaging the human rights mechanisms of the UN Human Rights Council, including its Universal Periodic Review (UPR) and special procedures (Special Rapporteurs, Working Groups, etc.)

For more details and application please visit this website: Click here.

Concept:
The short course provides an in depth examination of the law and politics of legal advocacy for the rights of refugees, with a particular focus on Asia. The course explores the various mechanisms through which refugee law is developed and can be enforced.

In adopting this focus, it seeks to address the contemporary challenge of those advocating on behalf of refugees: how can we engage the state and the international community so as to better allow refugees to enjoy the rights to which they are entitled?

The Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN) will convene this three-day workshop to meet the following objectives:

Why attend?

Whatever your level of involvement with refugee issues, this course will provide you with a deeper understanding of the legal frameworks that govern their rights and new ideas for advocacy based upon current case studies drawn from across Asia. Whether you are a post-graduate student, international agency staff, an NGO worker, lawyer or otherwise interested in refugee issues, the course will provide you with a new, rigorous, rights-based understanding of legal advocacy for refugee rights. Formal post-graduate academic credit available.

To apply, please fill out the application form here.

Please note, space and funding is limited, early application is, therefore, encouraged. Selected candidates will be contacted during the first week of March 2013. Finalised agenda and logistical information will be released and circulated to applicants and interested parties prior to mid-March 2013.

Queries are welcome and those seeking further information are encouraged to contact Danielle Grigsby at danielle@aprrn.info or Shannon Murphy at shannon.aprrn@gmail.com.

APRRN South Asian Refugee Mental Health Training, Chennai, India
Applications received through 31 March 2013

Concept:

The Training Course considers the psychological consequences of war and human rights violations on refugees. Traumatic and protracted refugee experiences place this group at elevated risk of diminished psychological and social well-being as well as chronic mental health disorders. This training is constructed to assist direct-service providers in responding holistically, considering all aspects of health (both psychological and somatic) in working with vulnerable refugee, IDP, or migrant populations.

The Asia Pacific Refugee Rights Network (APRRN) will convene this three-day workshop to meet the following objectives:

1: Enable individuals from direct-service organizations to respond holistically to the needs of refugee or displaced populations.

2: Enable health professionals (or otherwise identified experts, working directly with affected populations at the professional, clinical level) to train staff in mental health issues and to construct more efficient, holistic services for persons with mental illness under their care.

3: Provide opportunity for direct-service mental health professionals to network and share best practices. Too, structured mapping will be conducted to understand what service providers are doing in the region, what gaps are present, and identifying strategies or methods to bridge those gaps (done in terms of joint advocacy or future capacity strengthening programs).
It is intended that, through an original curriculum created by APRRN Right to Health Working Group’s Chair & Deputy Chair, the workshop will enable the following outcomes:

1: Integration of holistic approach to services for refugees and internally displaced people in organisations throughout South Asia.

2: Increased regional networking and best practice sharing with health service, or direct-service organisations.

3: Recognition of refugee mental health as a critical issue for consideration in the region.

APRRN seeks to bring together approximately 25 direct-service providers meeting the following participant-profile. Qualified applicants are encouraged to apply with APRRN online, filling out the application form found in this link: https://docs.google.com/spreadsheet/viewform?formkey=dEYydjV0SnM3UkVabFhSR2FTYUtHS1E6MQ#gid=0

Countries of applicant work: India, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Bhutan, Pakistan, Iran, Afghanistan

Scope of applicant work: direct-service providers or their supervisors working directly with refugee or internally displaced populations. Services include anything from direct mental-health training to education.

Finalised agenda and logistical information will be released and circulated to applicants and interested parties prior to 31 March 2013.

Queries are welcome and those seeking further information are encouraged to contact Danielle Grigsby at Danielle@aprrn.info

13th May – 19th May 2013: Centre for Refugee Studies

2013 Summer Course, Toronto, Canada

Non-visa applicants registration deadline: 1st April

The Summer Course on Refugee and Forced Migration Issues is an internationally acclaimed seven-day (May 13–19, 2013) non-credit course for academic and field-based practitioners working in the area of forced migration. It serves as a hub for researchers, students, practitioners, service providers and policy makers to share information and ideas.

The Summer Course provides an interdisciplinary, interactive and experiential approach to the study of forced migration. Through attending lectures and related small group sessions, course participants develop a deepened understanding of the political, economic, social and cultural contexts of forced migration, and the major state and non-state institutions involved in refugee protection and advocacy. Participants will have also an opportunity during the course for structured networking and idea collaboration through panels and small group discussion.

All participants who complete the full course receive a York University Centre for Refugee Studies Summer Course Certificate.

For more information see: http://crs.yorku.ca/summer/

2nd June – 9th June 2013: The Refugee Status Determination Process, Centre for Forced Migration Studies’ Summer Institute, Illinois, USA.

Timely registration deadline 2nd May

The CFMS Summer Institute is an intensive eight-day, non-degree earning certificate program. Through lectures, focused discussions, workshops and simulation exercises, the CFMS Summer Institute, held at Northwestern University’s campus in Evanston, IL, provides a forum to exchange ideas, build relationships, develop new approaches and policy recommendations and learn about new developments in the field. Past participants have included government officials, non-governmental organization personnel, university faculty and graduate students (select advanced undergraduate students may seek permission to attend). Applicants must have good to excellent English speaking and reading skills. No translation services are available.

The 2013 Summer Institute on The Refugee Status Determination Process introduces participants to the legal basis for refugee status and the variations in how authorities in different countries determine whether an asylum-seeker is eligible for refugee status. It provides students with guidance and workshops on case preparation including taking testimony, evidence documentation, working with victims of trauma and with issues of credibility and includes a focus on special topics such as LGBTI and gang-related asylum claims and cases involving unaccompanied minors.

Limited Scholarships and partial tuition assistance are available.

For more information see http://www.bcics.northwestern.edu/programs/migration/summer.html

9th August – 18th August 2013: 9th Annual International Leadership Training Programme: A Global Intergenerational Forum, Connecticut, USA

Application deadline 8th March 2013

The International Leadership Training Programme, organized as a forum, is premised on a three-fold understanding of the vital role leaders play in society. The first is that every new generation of human rights leaders builds on the work of those who came before it. The second is that in today’s increasingly interdependent global world, where actions or events in any part of the global system have impact on people in other regions of the world, there is a need to build a network of solidarity and to nurture a new cadre of human rights leaders who can educate others and provide enlightened leadership to meet the complex and multifaceted challenges of the new millennium.

Participants at the forum will be individuals from all over the world who have been involved in some capacity in human rights work in their communities. Selected young people will engage through dialogue with experienced and older human rights practitioners to gain management skills and techniques and

1st July – 19th July 2013: International Summer School in Forced Migration, Oxford, UK

Timely registration deadline 31st March

The summer school is aimed at mid-career or senior policy makers and practitioners involved with humanitarian assistance and policy making for forced migrants. Participants typically include host government officials, intergovernmental and non-governmental agency personnel engaged in planning, administering and co-ordinating assistance.

The summer school offers an intensive, interdisciplinary and participative approach to the study of forced migration. It aims to enable people working with refugees and other forced migrants to reflect critically on the forces and institutions that dominate the world of the displaced.

For more information see: http://www.rsc.ox.ac.uk/study/international-summer-school a greater understanding of human rights issues on a global level.

For the application form or more information please see: http://www.unescochair.uconn.edu/upspecialevents.htm

Recent Reports

Odhikar’s 2012 Report on Human Rights in Bangladesh

UNHCR Eligibility Guidelines for Assessing the International Protection needs of Asylum-Seekers from Sri Lanka

Immigration Detention Working Group Report for APRRN